WILMOT LUTHERAN PARSONAGE BURNS

The Lutheran parsonage at Wilmette, occupied by Rev. J. E. Judd and family, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, incurring a loss of over $5,000.

The fire was caused by a blaze in the chimney, which was first noticed about 11 o'clock in the morning, but was not reported. The Silver Lake fire department was called at 3 o'clock in the afternoon by some member of the electric crew of the Wisconsin Gas Company. In spite of the efforts of the department, and of many volunteers, the house and most of the furniture was destroyed.

D. PEPPY PROGRAM PLANNED FOR FARM MEETING

Meeting of Farm Bureau and Supply Co. Will Be January 22

Having secured several entertainers of well-known ability, farm leaders are planning on an unusually large attendance at the joint annual meeting of the Lake County Farm Bureau and Farm Supply Company, which will be held at the Graylake Opera House, Thursday, January 22.

The Lake County women are given a special invitation this year to be present.

The program will start at 10 a.m. P. G. Plant Pete, an outstanding radio star of WLS radio station, Chicago, will open the program with fifteen minutes of entertainment with the guitar and harmonica, also singing and reciting.

L. H. Merchant, of the State Farm Supply Company, will talk at 11:15 a.m. following reports by the various officers.

A dinner will be served for 65 cents per plate by one of the Graylake churches at 12 o'clock.

The McHenry County home bureau, under the leadership of Mrs. Clara Greaves, home advisor, will present a play at 1:15 p.m.

Miss Lulu Black, temporary home advisor of Lake County, will give a report on home bureau work and tell what the home bureau is doing in other counties.

Scandinavian Band, from Elgin Corners, of Kane County, home bureau, will furnish a half hour of entertainment.

The day will close with an address by Larry Williams, the best livestock, most entertaining speaker on the Illinois Agricultural Association staff.

Instant death befell Arthur Morrell, 50, a workman at the Tweed Ice plant in Ingleside, when he was struck Tuesday night by a Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific passenger train, as he was returning to Ingleside, walking along the tracks with bowed head. The accident occurred about 1,000 feet east of the Fox Lake station.

The engineer of the train stated that he had not seen the man until too late to avoid the accident. Morrell was so badly cut that he could scarcely be identified.

Morrell was well-known in the vicinity of Fox Lake, having lived there all his life. He is survived by one brother, Guy, of Fox Lake.

An inquest was held today at the Graylake funeral home.

PLAY BIG GAME OF SEASON WITH LIBERTYVILLE MON.

Basket ball enthusiasts, remembering engagements of previous seasons with the over-dangerous Libertyville team, and headed battles with the Antioch high school's nearest rival, Warren, are due for two thrillers this week-end when Antioch plays at Warren Friday night, and more especially, when Libertyville meets the locals on the Antioch floor Monday evening.

Barring tournament contests, probably no other two games during the entire season produce such enthusiasm or draw such crowds. With Libertyville having lost one game, and Antioch, two, the teams promise to be quite evenly matched. However, no matter who is slated to win by the diehards, the game is always interesting. Libertyville is building up a great team for next year, having only three seniors on the squad at present.

The new electric score board, which has been presented to the school by the senior class of '31, will be installed, and will be used Monday evening.

The Palatine boys handed Antioch an overwhelming defeat Friday evening, downing the team 31-5. Their excellent defense was unbeatable. The local second string took their game with a 18-11 score.

THE COMMUNITY CHEST

It must be with considerable degree of satisfaction that American Legion men of Antioch community view the first week's progress of the drive inaugurated by them seven days ago to establish a community chest fund. The idea of creating a community-wide fund for relief work has met with almost instantaneous favor, and the drive, now well under way, seems destined to be successful.

The tentative plan of selecting an executive committee composed of members chosen from the various local organizations has met with approval, and, no doubt, there will be a complete, community-wide co-operation in the project which has been pronounced by leading citizens as one of the finest moves ever launched in this community. It is recognized that a certain amount of charity work in each community is vital, and the local American Legion post, in effecting the organization for a united charities effort, will have rendered a genuine community service.

It is well known that thousands of dollars are given annually by Antioch people for charitable purposes; however, the individual efforts have been scattered and relief work has been promiscuous. Undoubtedly the centralizing of the community's charitable efforts under one governing body will be productive of greater efficiency, and donors will have the satisfaction of knowing that funds contributed will be expended for the purposes intended. Antioch has ever been a fertile field for promiscuous solicitors who claim to represent this, that, or the other charitable organization; but there is always the doubt that such solicitors are honest. Those who can afford it, should contribute to all causes known to be worthy, wherever they may be. However, it must be remembered that charity, like many other of the good graces, begins at home.

TO THE VOTERS OF SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 35.

In the coming election, Saturday, January 17, the board of directors is asking an increase of their authority, which is to levy the tax of 1 1/2 per cent to 2 per cent, or an increase of 50¢ per cent.

The resultant money will not be paid in taxes until the spring of 1932, and is to pay off the balance of the new school building, which was not taken care of by the bond issue.

The increase asked for is for the one year only.

If this balance is not taken care of in 1932 it will be an extra burden in 1933, when, according to the present assessed valuation, a tax of 1 1/2 of 1 per cent will be placed on the district by the county clerk to care for the first hand and interest on all.

CHAS. A. ATWOOD. (23c)

the fact that such a wind always results in an abnormal number of fires, and that the department does its fighting to immediately when that wind appears.

It would be a good plan for all property owners to find out from their fire departments the local conditions which are conducive to fire loss and how to offset them. Fire departments would rather tell you why your fire might start than why it did start.

Most of us allow our flues and chimneys to go unattended until they become extremely hazardous. And corrective steps are seldom taken until we have had a fire. Preparedness against seasonal fire risks would require but little time and money and would pay high dividends in protection to life and property.

In the United States most of us take fire for granted, not realizing the gigantic economic waste it entails. During 1930 the total waste was higher than in several preceding years. And it will continue to grow until individuals understand the common hazards that exist in every home and guard against them.

WISDOM AT A PREMIUM

If America ever had a need for wisdom and understanding on the part of public officials and business men, it needs those qualities now.

The social and economic problems that came to a head in the past year have produced a multitude of proposals for half-baked and unsound legislation. Men in the highest positions are seeking to commit the nation to programs which would result in a tremendous increase in taxes without permanently solving any problems.

The cure for our present-day difficulties lies with industry and the people. Wise and well-considered governmental aid can help. But the public—which will, in the long run, reap the benefit from or pay for whatever action is taken now—should do its part in helping to maintain sound government and business free from fake panaceas proposed by emotional or vote-seeking office holders.

THE DISCLOSURES IN NEW YORK

One of the main reasons why crime pays, when conducted on a large scale, has been shown by the recent investigation of New York judges.

According to the New Yorker, which sums up the evidence in its issue of December 20, charges of graft or misconduct of one kind or another have been made against a federal judge, a judge of the General Sessions and four city magistrates. In other words, seven out of the hundred judges in the largest city in the world are believed to have had illegal connections. This record is illustrative of a situation that probably exists in many communities in this country.

"PREVENTION AND CURE"

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This is an old saying and contains a volume of truth. "A stitch in time, saves nine," is also a common saying and full of meaning. The fact is that if this philosophy of life were taken more seriously in the numerous phases of life this world would be a much more desirable place in which to live.

One of the slogans of Bill Hayes, who announces for "Amos 'n' Andy," is, "Use Pepsodent toothpaste twice a day; see your dentist at least twice a year." He believes that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." That is, Pepsodent toothpaste will not cure your teeth of any ills, but by using it in keeping the teeth clean, you are going along ways in preventing any ills. And also by seeing your dentist twice a year you are preventing anything serious from happening to your teeth. It is perfectly obvious that it is much more economical in the long run to follow the advice of Bill Hayes and prevent any tooth trouble rather than to wait until something serious is developed and then seek a cure.

This advice could be very profitably followed regarding seeing our doctor "twice a year" as well as seeing our dentist twice a year. Most of us wait until we need the doctor for some cure, when maybe it is too late, rather than going to him as a measure of prevention. No one will ever be able to say just how many lives are lost each year because medical treatment has been delayed until it was too late for any cure to counteract the harm that has been done. Surely in this, too, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

General Pershing is now contributing a series of articles to the public through the Chicago Daily News as to his views of the World War. He has very clearly stated that he believes that adequate preparedness on the part of the United States could have prevented the disastrous results of the war. He believes that if we could have entered the war when it first began we could have done more to prevent what did happen that we were able to do by entering at so late a date and with such poor preparation.

The Boy Scout movement, which in the past thirty years has spread into most of the countries of the world, has been a great influence in prevention. Every real Scout knows prevention is better than cure. The result has been that Scouting has been a great preventive force in keeping boys from becoming wayward. A certain judge of a juvenile court has made the statement in public and in writing that among the thousands of boys who pass through his court every year, it is most exceptional when a boy who has been a Scout is brought before the court for judgment. He believes that the Scout movement has prevented hundreds of boys from becoming criminals. Perhaps Scouting cannot cure a boy who has become criminally minded, but it can and does do much in preventing him from becoming so.

The same can be said of the church. Its greatest service to the community around it is not as a cure of the moral ills, but as a means of prevention. The church is interested in the cure of habits that are harmful, but it can much more easily help in preventing the acquiring of habits that are harmful. And it is any less a work of importance to prevent one from acquiring a harmful habit than it is to help him break it? Religious training is one of the greatest creative influences in existence. Religious training tends to help one in becoming a good citizen.

It Always Pays to Plan
Even a Lone Home Lunch

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept.,
H. J. Heinz Company

TOO often, women who are alone for the noon-day meal either neglect to eat anything, or just take a few bites of cold food and then hurry right back to their tasks. This is a serious mistake! A full noon hour of relaxation and rest—both mental and physical—is needed to avoid distressing fatigue at the close of the day. And the luncheon itself, no matter how light it may be, should include at least one hot dish.

It is amazing, too, what can be done to "left-over" food. In just a few minutes, to make it attractive and appetizing. Very often the refrigerator will yield a small quantity of food that requires only a bit of hasty "dressing up" to become just the dish that a busy woman requires for lunch.

Below are a number of recipes for one. Try them and see how easily they will suggest yet other ways to obtain a better noon-day meal for the woman who lunches alone.

Let us suppose you have some of these left-overs in the refrigerator:

a. Broiled meat cake: 1 broiled meat cake, 1 spoon Oven-Baked Beans, 1 serving cold roast pork or veal, 1 spoon Cooked Spaghetti, 1 serving cold broiled or baked ham, 1 spoon apple sauce, 1 serving Cream of Tomato Soup, 1 sausage cake.

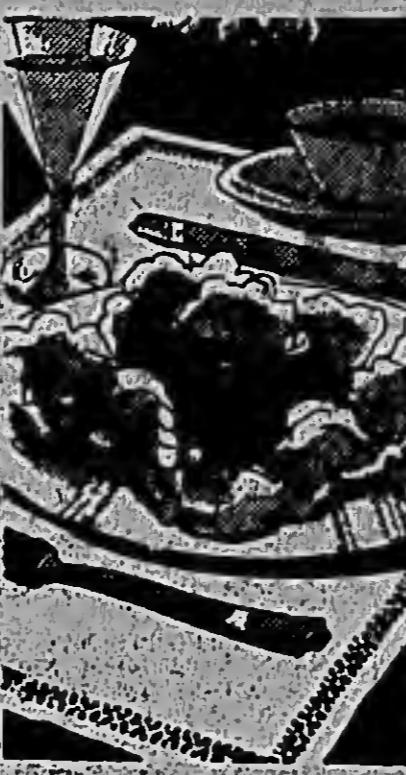

Now for some successful ways to use these left-overs:

a. Meat Cake with Tomato Sauce: Pour a small can of Cream of Tomato Soup over the meat. Allow to simmer until the sauce is thick and rich, adding a few drops of onion juice and a small amount of thickening, if desired.

b. Oven Baked Beans with Poached Egg: Heat the beans, then place them on a slice of buttered toast, and top with a poached egg. Serve with whole wheat bread and fruit to make a well-balanced luncheon.

c. Roast Veal or Pork Salad:

Chop the meat, season well with salt and pepper, and add an equal amount of shredded cabbage, or celery. Moisten with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing and use as filling for a Stuffed Tomato Salad, or around attractively in a nest of lettuce.

d. Spaghetti with Bacon: Fry several slices of bacon until almost crisp. Drain off almost all of the fat, add a spoon of Cooked Spaghetti, and cook until the spaghetti is heated through. Serve with a green salad.

e. Scrambled Egg with Ham and Chili Sauce: Chop the ham and combine it with 1 tablespoon Chili Sauce. Add to a scrambled egg when partially cooked, and stir gently until finished.

f. Apple Sauce Betty: Arrange alternate layers of Rice Flakes and apple sauce in a serving dish and serve with cream and sugar.

g. Tomato Rabbit: Heat Tomato Soup, add a small amount of grated cheese, and allow to melt over a slow fire. Stir in 1 beaten egg. Serve on a slice of buttered toast.

h. Cuban Egg: Chop a left-over sausage cake and add to it 1 tablespoon Tomato Ketchup. Heat in a skillet, add 1 beaten egg, and salt and pepper, and stir until cooked. Garnish with parsley and serve.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy Chicago family, is determined to marry Will, for a youthful newspaper artist, of a not particularly well-to-do carpenter, her elder Lillian, more of the conventional type, who had made the book of bird pictures for her—a book she still loved and possessed, and which she had been showing to Peter only a day or two ago. Will had so loved the color of wings.

She recalled the water colors on his mother's walls; the smugged pictures of John Dryer when he was a baby—crude but warm. She remembered what Mrs. Todd had said—all the neighbors thought Will would be a great artist some day. If they were not subjugated to her biological necessities.

She recalled the water colors on his mother's walls; the smugged pictures of John Dryer when he was a baby—crude but warm. She remembered what Mrs. Todd had said—all the neighbors thought Will would be a great artist some day. If they were not subjugated to her biological necessities.

CHAPTER II.—The love-making progresses swiftly and analys, largely because of Ernestine's urging, they make a "runaway" marriage. Briceland is infuriated but helpless. Ernestine's brother, Peter, a young, good-looking, successful lawyer, urges Ernestine to end the affair, but the latter, incapable of a positive decision, and realizing that in Will Todd, she has found her affianced, refuses.

CHAPTER III.—The love-making progresses swiftly and analys, largely because of Ernestine's urging, they make a "runaway" marriage. Briceland is infuriated but helpless. Ernestine's brother, Peter, a young, good-looking, successful lawyer, urges Ernestine to end the affair, but the latter, incapable of a positive decision, and realizing that in Will Todd, she has found her affianced, refuses.

CHAPTER IV.—John Poole, Will's best friend, successful though dissatisfied, artfully gives a birthday party for Peter, and, in the course of a bantering resort on the fringes of the underworld, Pastano, notorious as a hoodlagger and game leader, irritates Ernestine by his criticism of her for Will. Peter, his wife, goes to such places. Appealing to Will to take her home, he delegates the task to a friend, Tommy Tucker, explaining that he must go to Pastano to distract his mother from Will's infatuation.

CHAPTER V.—Reapproaching him for leaving her "unprotected" in his care for Poole, Will takes an attitude which awakens Ernestine to the reality of her new life. She is conscious of a growing motherhood, and the anticipation of the event opens a small window of opportunity.

CHAPTER VI.—Will's father dies suddenly. A suggestion that the funeral be held from the Briceland home, the Todd house, being small, meets with refusal, to which Will has been sorrowful. His father attended the quiet. He offers Ernestine financial aid, which she declines. In loyalty to Will, Ernestine declines his offer on a visit of condolence, and Ernestine is touched by his friendliness. The shock of her husband's death leaves the elder Mrs. Todd a homeless invalid. Will and Loring are married.

CHAPTER VII.—Will's mother dies suddenly. Immediately after the birth of Ernestine's child, the couple move in to the Todd house. Loring goes into the intention of "going into" politics, in association with Pastano, with whom he has formed a friendship. There is no hope for wealth, but Ernestine's wife's fall to bring him advancement, and Ernestine is again looking forward to motherhood.

CHAPTER VIII.—Pastano acquires a home at Langley lake, a rustic retreat where the Bricelands have a cabin. Loring and his wife, the sisters, loyal to both their husbands, feel separated. Will, disheveled, no longer in his discharge, Poole, indolent, begins Ernestine's difficulties, and her approaching motherhood affects her health. On a trip to the bank she faints on the street.

CHAPTER IX.—Unconscious, Ernestine is taken to a hospital, where Will, assisted by Loring, finds her. After a night of agonizing, she is born, and Ernestine's recovery assured. Will, with Poole in opening an independent studio, which promises to be successful, The Todd's take up their life again.

CHAPTER X.—Poole's lack of interest in the new venture threatens to wreck it, as he has no vision of success as a painter. The doctor informs him Poole in opening an independent studio, which promises to be successful. The Todd's take up their life again.

CHAPTER XI.—Poole's death causes the closing of the studio. Financial difficulties again confront Will and Ernestine. She has been compelled to work, but Will seems to be little disturbed, occupying himself with work he does not let her see. With the children, Ernestine goes to visit the Pastano's. In Loring's absence, Pastano, leaving, Will, feeling they are drifting apart, seeks to reach an understanding with Ernestine, without telling her of his ambition to become a painter, but has little success.

CHAPTER XII.—Loring pleads with Ernestine to leave Will and return to her parents. She heeds, but an interview with Pastano, lawless though he is, convinces her that she must stay. Next morning, realizing what the action would mean to him, she knows she cannot do it, and returns to Will. She also informs him that with the rift in the late days, Will, with the rift in the late days, Will, with a new idea for a comic strip, It is an immediate success. Money flows in. Ernestine's third child is born.

She looked through everything and found material with the dust of a year upon it. In a pile were pictures of the popular tree. He had made the tree again and again. She caught a hint of desperation. He had been deliberately careless. He had distorted the limbs, but neither the carelessness nor the distortion had given him the quality that lay now on the board with the charcoal sketch of herself on the stairs—a thing either life, vitality.

Months of work. Months of struggle. Secret, silent—new idea, a new stirring pain, goading him out of his path.

And every morning he had to go and make the cut cartoons. He had to go from the Sun to the movie studio. When he was longing to experiment with this new conception, he was ready to leave satiric for a new form of beauty. He was ready to establish a new and modern school of work.

It was not an unnatural development. Looking back, it seemed to Ernestine that the years had conspired in order to accomplish this. She remembered the little boy with the leg

"From working?" she asked, and then regretted swiftly. That was too much like that other time—that other time.

Will did not seem to be ready. But Will did not seem to be ready.

He had changed. He had become silent, morose, irritable. There was no question now as to where he was spending his time, for he played bridge hours every day. He won constantly. Ernestine kept him as elious of money as she could, subtiring all that she could lay hands on to her own purposes. She did not know how much money he won at cards, but his maula was a new thing, and she could not understand it. One night at a dance to the club to which he belonged she saw him through the open door of the cardroom, sitting at a heavy round table, his face absolutely set, his dark eyes watchful, playing in an intense absorption.

"How does he play?" she asked her partner, a friend of Will. "I've played with him, of course, but always with women, and he seemed indifferent—careless."

"I wish I could get him at a table when there were women there," the man, a middle-aged illustrator, answered. "He has great deal of my money. He plays an extraordinarily good game, and every one likes to play with him because he minds his own business. He plays for study, but he doesn't row. He makes no mistakes, but he doesn't jump on the fellow who does. And cards! Oh, boy—he has them. He has an also lately marvelous memory."

Ernestine knew this. Will's memory was part of his equipment as an artist. He would be able to visualize each trick that had fallen, without error, she knew. But she was troubled. She understood the psychological use of the word "substitution," and it occurred to her to compare Will with Will at the bridge table, but she could not get the thing clearly. Will was druging himself with the mechanical occupation of cards. The cards interested, absorbed, fascinated him. The mesmeric fascination of the game were useful to him as a means of stilling something—she could not quite get it. She could not ask him whether he had censed going to the little office. She felt balked and wounded.

One day when he telephoned that he would not eat at home, and came in after a roll of bills,

"I've been playing for ten cents a point. Won rubber after rubber," he said indifferently.

Ernestine picked up the money and counted it.

"This will pay for—she began, and Will exclaimed passionately:

"My God! Ernestine, what do you do with the money? I never see you that you don't have your hand held out to me!"

Her fear gave her sudden fury.

"Am I to account to you for every penny?" she exclaimed. "I did with out, long enough. Now that you're earning, are you going to be niggardly with me? Don't you dare ask me what I do with my money!"

He made no answer, his face bored and scornful. She had been thinking that when he came in she would try to talk to him, but now the moment was passed. He undressed and got into bed, and said in his quick irritable way:

"Either turn out the light or go somewhere else. I'm tired."

Writes 1930 Is Banner Year for Kansas Corn

Corn averaging ninety bushels to the acre was the rule in the state of Kansas in 1930, according to a letter received here this week by J. H. Van Patten from his brother, Homer, who has lived at Almena in the Sunflower state for over half a century. Kansas evidently was not much affected by the summer's drought. Other crops were just as bountiful as was the corn crop, Mr. Van Patten writes.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Patten celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary with their children and grandchildren on New Year's day.

COLLEGE HEROESTell the Boys That Knute
Rockne Is Pronounced
Like "Knoot"

Have your boys taken the hint and begun to imitate the Notre Dame men in their eating habits? Stuhldreher, a former Notre Dame man, and player of the "Four Horsemen" team, has more to tell them. If your boy is out kicking around in the hopes of making the football squad on Antioch's team next season, encourage him by reading to him what real "stars" have to say.

Stuhldreher was emphatic about the willingness with which the players adhere strictly to the food regulations. Occasionally some of the boys find it a little hard to eat some of the foods they don't happen to like—spinach, for instance—but they know only too well how important good food is to their success, and they take their eating seriously. One time Coach Rockne caught one of the players down at a drug store limbiling some frappe at the soda fountain during the trudging season. The boy saw him, and expected a lecture. But Rockne only said to him: "Have another. I'll buy you one"—and that afternoon at practice the boy suffered for it by having to work about three times as hard as anyone else. The lesson stuck, not only with that boy, but with the rest of the squad.

"After a game," Stuhldreher said, "the players are just like a bunch of hungry wildcats. But here is a good example for all of us: They rest for at least a half-hour after they eat anything. It's just as harmful to eat immediately after a game, or any strenuous physical exercise, as it is to eat just before going swimming."

"Regularity is very important. Notre Dame men eat regularly three times a day, and do not eat between meals except perhaps an apple at bed time. They drink plenty of water between meals, but not at the table. And in sleeping habits regularity is just as important. All Notre Dame athletes turn in before 10, or, at the latest, 10:30. Eating and sleeping really come in the same category—without proper sleep and rest, the body cannot digest and make the best use of the food it gets."

In answer to questions concerning the pronunciation of Knute Rockne and Notre Dame, Stuhldreher said that Knute should be pronounced "Knoot," not "Noot." Notre Dame can be pronounced in several ways, but the English pronunciation "Neter Deym" is preferred to the French "Nutra Dahn."

I hope all the women can impress on their sons the importance of good sensible food, and regular eating and sleeping habits. That's one lesson football teaches that applies to every boy in our country. He may never grow up to be a football star himself, but whatever his inclination when he does grow up, he will never regret the strong sturdy body proper eating will give him.

Perfect American Hostess Defined
By Mrs. J. M. Doran of WashingtonWife of U. S. Dry Executive Shakes Snappy But
Legal Cocktails

What makes a perfect hostess? The question arose in an animated conversation on social customs in which three young women of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. James M. Doran, wife of the recent U. S. Commissioner of Prohibition, were participants. The young women's definitions ran something like these:

The ability to make her guests feel at home.

The serving of things her guests like best.

The serving of things to which her guests are accustomed.

Inasmuch as the conversation was largely about beverages, Mrs. Doran insisted that some of these and similar answers were correct. She then gave this, as her own definition:

The ability to serve beverages which are palatable, healthful, interesting and happy.

Mrs. Doran feels that the modern hostess of today can realize her greatest and make them

School Day Luncheons

Healthful and Simple Snacks Children Like
for Noon Meals

WHAT to give Jimmie or Mary for lunch is one of the problems puzzling many mothers of school children these days. The school child's lunch is usually a hasty meal, whether it is eaten at home or at school. In either case, it's often a quick snack, an eat-and-run meal. They are too busy, or too excited to bother much about food.

The problem concerns more than giving them the food they like, in the variety they want; it also involves giving them what their active young bodies need.

Sandwiches, the most popular items in the lunch box taken to school, are best for the child when made with cereal breads, rich in vitamins and minerals.

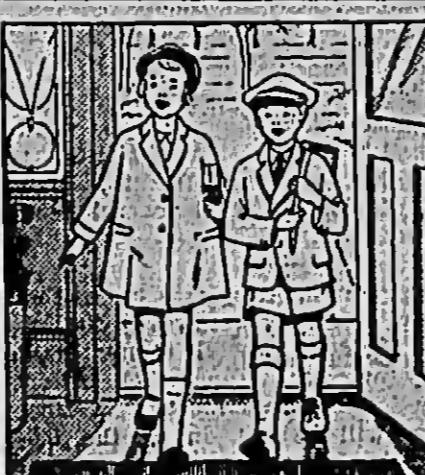

Vegetables, such as baked beans (in a small glass jar) and celery, or celery stuffed with a soft cheese, may be packed in the lunch. If the child carries a thermos bottle, a hot cereal beverage, made with milk, will provide needed nourishment.

Deserts in the school lunch box may be fresh, canned, or stewed dried fruits. Nourishing coconut cream, gelatin desserts, wholesome plain cake, gingerbread, little sponge cakes, cookies and other healthy sweets will be enjoyed at recess time.

Sandwich fillings, popular with children, and at the same time containing needed health-giving elements, are:

Cottage cheese, chopped olive and mayonnaise.

Cottage cheese and jelly or jam.

Cheese, mashed and moistened with cream.

Pimento cream cheese.

Peanut butter moistened with orange juice.

Chopped hard-cooked egg, celery and mayonnaise.

Egg salad with chopped dill pickle.

Coconut, chopped dates, nuts and orange juice.

Crisp bacon, cabbage leaf and mayonnaise, with thin slices of sweet pickle.

Tuna fish, or salmon, celery, cabbage leaf and mayonnaise.

Cold meat or meat loaf, sliced thin.

It is important that the child be given the following foods every day, not necessarily at lunch time, but in the three meals:

3 to 4 servings of milk.

5 servings of graham or whole wheat bread.

1 serving of egg.

1 serving of potato.

1 serving of unrefined cereal.

3 servings of butter.

1 serving of sugar or other sweet.

Additional servings of any of these foods may be chosen.

mount. We know how vitally important it is for little children to have a fine environment, which will guide, to a certain extent, their future judgment.

Mrs. Richey explains, in detail, the correct harmonizing colors and arrangement of the furnishings of a room:

"As my topic is entitled 'Interior Decoration,' I shall try to stay indoors throughout my talk, and to start with, I shall speak of exposures of rooms in the home. Rooms with a northerly exposure should be decorated with warm colors. The walls may be a soft yellow or cream, as yellow is suggestive of warmth, light and gaiety; or a soft tint of rose, as rose contains red, which is a warm color.

"Rooms with a southerly exposure look best if decorated in cool colors. Soft tints of green, blue or violet are very desirable to use, the one used depending upon one's taste. Furthermore, rooms of homes located in a cold region are appropriately decorated in cheerful colors, while homes in southern regions of the earth are well done in cool colors."

In Antioch, there are several things to consider: The gloomy winter days, the necessity for a fire of some kind for eight or nine months during the year, the dust in summer time; on the other hand, the natural outdoor beauty, which will want to be reflected in your home.

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of talks by Mrs. Richey on this subject, which will appear from time to time.

Moods are influenced by environment.

SMART, NEAT, 2-TONED

These smart models of fashionable oxford, pump, and strap slippers show conclusively that the vamp, too, is a thing of the past. With the longer, more feminine gowns, come daintier, more pointed shoes. The simplicity of the oxford, in new-style patent, is relieved by the gray cross strap of grained leather. The heel marks the shoe as one suitable for office wear. The pump, with the bow ribbon, and high cut tongue, harmonizing silver and black colors, and high heel, is particularly designed as a partner of the "dance dress." The elipper, which also has contrasting colors, is appealing because of the narrow strap. This style is useful to the test, and for this reason is popular among business girls.

Hints For Homemakers
By Jane Rogers

FRESH peaches in mid-winter, to garnish our cereals and for dessert, sounds like a dream, but for the first time in history fruit has been successfully treated by a quick-freezing process which makes it available for the winter-table in all its original flavor and freshness. The peaches that will be enjoyed this winter promise to be the first of a long line of new and delicious food products for the family menu.

Two or three lumps of agar added to the vinegar will give a piquant and appealing flavor to practically all pickles.

TOPPY'S TRAVELS

Synopsis: Toppy leaves his home to follow his canary, who flies away. After many adventures, he escapes from the Pillows, enemies of his Cloud-Queen, whom he tried to save. He and his friends, Mr. Frog and Toy, the dewdrop, manage to secure the key to a room which gives power to the Queen. Toy and Toppy anxiously await Mr. Frog's return. Continue:

"Do you see him coming yet?" Toppy asked after what seemed to him a long time.

"No," answered Toy, and paused, listening. "But I hear something chuffing toward us," he said, after a moment, in a very tiny voice.

"I hope you are feeling better now," Toppy said politely.

"I'd feel better if I had something to eat," Mr. Frog suggested.

Toppy wanted to be caught if he hunted for flies and bugs in the garden, so asked again, timidly, as he was afraid Mr. Frog would be angry with him. "Do you eat anything besides flies and bugs?"

"Yes, when I'm sick I do. If you will lift the leaves and branches off the ground on the south side of this bush, you will find some worms. Take care, and you can remain hidden from the view of anyone who might come into the garden."

Toppy hurried away, seeking the spot very cautiously. Brushing aside the leaves and branches, he saw worms of every size start to move and wriggle away. Picking them up one by one, his hands soon could hold no more, but as he turned to crawl under the branches back to the nest, he peered through the bushes, and saw two guards talking and staring toward the place where he was hiding.

They began to walk leisurely toward him. Poor Toppy! His heart sank, and he was afraid to breathe; for fear the guards would see the branches move.

The guards came no closer, but sat down and began to talk. The little boy wondered if they ever meant to leave. (Continued next week.)

ROUND THE PHILIPPINES

It was while Tops'l Barney's schooner was lyin' at th' dock in Manila that Kangy and I went out into th' country beyond Manila to see what we could see.

We'd no sooner cleared th' town when a native cart hauled by a water-buffalo, hova in sight. Th' brown youngster drivin' grinned and motioned to us to hop aboard which we did. We had a fine ride for a mile or so, then the little fellow pointed to a side trail and stopped. I got th' meanin' of his jabber—that was where he turned into another road.

So we hopped down and once more struck off afoot. We'd gone a little ways when our peepers lighted on a lot of bamboo cages hung around a native house. A brown fellow that could sputter a little English told us that he had to shut his chickens in th' cages at night to save 'em from th' rats. A little farther along we spied a native walkin' up th' leanin' trunk of a tree to his front door. Then we passed a native carryin' a load of fruit and chickens in from his farm.

Well sir we had a lot of fun on that trip. Before th' day was over we rode on a cocoanut raft, had a ride on a native horse, and heard th' dong, dong, dong, of a strange bird that calls out th' hours like clockwork.

Later on I hired a native and his outrigger canoe for a trip on a blue lagoon. Well sir in th' water of that lagoon we saw some queer fish. There were fat and thin fish; fish shaped like a blown-up balloon covered with spines; big, fierce-eyed eels with gapping mouths; fish colored like a rainbow, and some as thin as a leaf.

When we came ashore th' sun was gettin' low in th' sky so we struck out for Manila and soon were on th' deck of our schooner.

SEE THOSE CAGES HANGIN' THERE? TH' PEOPLE HAVE TO PUT THEIR CHICKENS IN 'EM AT NIGHT TO SAVE 'EM FROM TH' RATS.

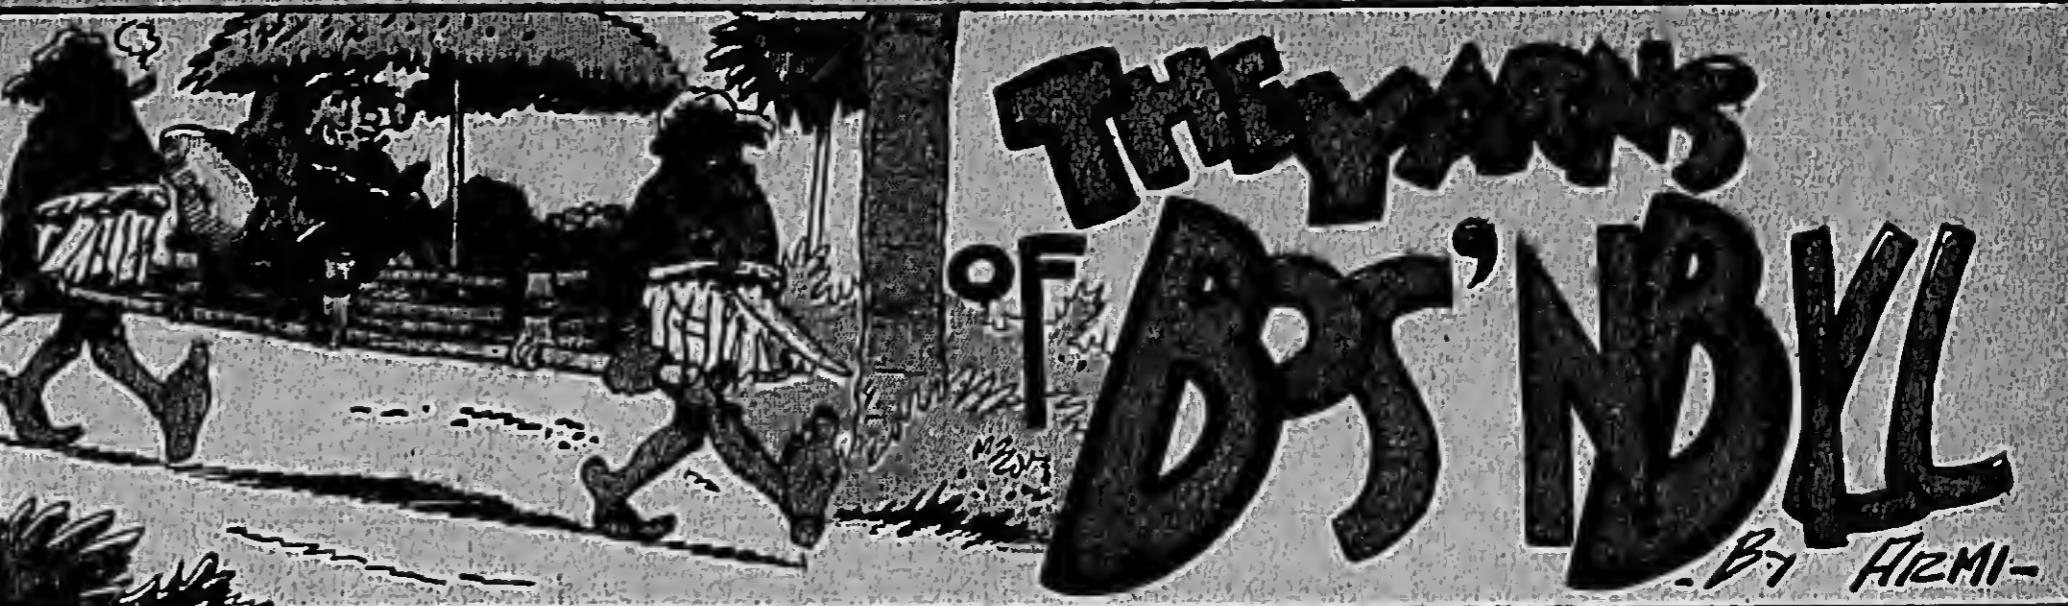

I'LL BET YOU'VE NEVER HAD A RIDE ON A COCONUT-RAFT BEFORE KANGY!

CHK-CHK!

YOU TELL HIM TRUG. YOU KNOW HOW TO DO IT.
